RE: Arkansas Ag in the Classroom Teacher Award

The Arkansas Ag in the Classroom Teacher Award recognizes an outstanding teacher in Arkansas that incorporates agricultural themes into non-agricultural curricula. If you know teachers who use Ag in the Classroom, please encourage them to apply for the award. Teachers can be self-nominated, nominated by fellow teachers, principals or superintendents, or nominated by a county Farm Bureau leader.

There are many outstanding teachers that are using Ag in the Classroom, and your teacher may be the next state winning teacher in Arkansas and possibly the next national award winner from Arkansas. The winning teacher will be awarded a monetary prize, an expense paid trip to the National Ag in the Classroom Conference and recognized at the Arkansas Farm Bureau Annual Convention. Don't miss out on the opportunity to recognize an outstanding teacher in your county, because their recognition for using Ag in the Classroom is also a celebration of the efforts of your county Farm Bureau.

The award program guidelines and a nomination form may be downloaded from the Arkansas Farm Bureau website at www.arfb.com on the Education page. Deadline for application is April 1, 2020.

Thank you for helping spread the word about the award program. If you have any other questions, you may contact Matt Jackson by email at matt.jackson@arfb.com or by phone at 501-228-1237.

Arkansas Ag-in-the-Classroom Outstanding Teacher Award

The Arkansas Farm Bureau's Ag-in-the-Classroom program will honor an Arkansas teacher that integrates the concepts of agriculture into non-agricultural curricula. Agriculture is an important part of everyone's life, and is the largest industry in Arkansas. The concepts and issues of agriculture can support the teaching of many academic disciplines. This award was created to recognize and honor an educator in Arkansas for efforts and achievements in teaching students the importance of agriculture.

Innovative and interdisciplinary programs are encouraged.

Award:
